Statement of Purpose (SOP) Guidelines

The SOP is a student's opportunity to demonstrate to the university why it should select their application. The SOP should give a picture of the student as someone who is interested in the subject area and as someone who has the potential to do well in their studies. A strong SOP can showcase a student's uniqueness helping them stand out from a multitude of similarly qualified candidates. A student's SOP should focus on three main areas:

1. Why do they want to study this subject?

Key areas to consider include:

- Knowledge of the subject area
- What does the programme entail?
- Why is the programme of interest?
- Where could studying the programme lead?
- How will studying overseas assist?

2. What have they done in the past that makes them particularly suitable to study the subject?

Key areas to consider include:

- Previous academic studies
- Relevant work experience (including voluntary work or any work done in the family business)
- Hobbies and interests
- Things learnt from newspapers, TV programmes, books, etc.
- Particular project work, research or internships undertaken as part of studies

3. What else have they done that would contribute to the course and the university community and what makes them an interesting and unique individual?

Key areas to consider include:

- Sports, hobbies and other leisure activities
- Extra-curricular activities
- Responsibilities held at school, university or in clubs/societies
- Major achievements
- Lessons learnt from voluntary/paid employment

Writing an SOP: A Summary of Do's and Don'ts

★ Do

- ◆ Make a strong opening statement, ensuring clarity right from the start about why you are applying for the particular course.
- ◆ Discuss your draft with teachers, family and other people who may be able to help. Write and re-write until you are completely happy. Be sure to check for any spelling, punctuation or grammatical errors before submitting.
- ◆ Write in a clear and concise manner. Avoid complicated language or lengthy paragraphs but ensure that your enthusiasm for the programme shines through.

★ Don't

- ◆ Think carefully about the structure so that it is coherent, flows well and clearly communicates the key messages that the university needs to hear.
- ◆ Ensure that every bit of information is relevant and that you clearly demonstrate how skills learnt from hobbies, outside interests or work are transferable to your chosen degree.
- ◆ Use humour or try to be funny. This is a risky strategy as humour is subjective. Stick to a safer and more formal approach.
- ◆ Use quotes unless critical to the point you are making. The university wants to know what you have to say not what somebody else has said.
- ◆ Copy somebody else's work. This is known as 'plagiarism' and it could jeopardize your application.
- ◆ Lie, exaggerate or show off. Think hard about what you want to convey and be honest in your writing.
- ◆ Mention skills, knowledge or activities without backing them up with examples of how you developed these, when you used them and what lessons you learnt.

Letter of Recommendation (LOR) Guidelines

The Letter of Recommendation (LOR) forms an important part of a student's application for admission. All universities will ask for LORs as they provide a useful independent perspective on a student's strengths, abilities and accomplishments that cannot be easily gleaned by simply reviewing a student's transcripts or standardized test scores.

* Who should write the LOR?

The person writing the LOR should have known the student in an academic or professional capacity. This could be a:

Teacher/Professor: Students should aim to select a referee that teaches a similar subject to that being applied for (e.g. a Business Studies referee for a BBA; Maths/Physics referee for Engineering, etc.). The referee should have known the student for at least one-academic year.

Employer/Supervisor: Where a student has worked for at least one year a reference should be sought from their company. The referee should be the person to whom the student reported directly.

Client/Customer: Where a student has worked in their family business a reference can be sought from clients or customers. The referee should be someone with whom the student has been interacting for a reasonable period of time.

* What should an LOR contain?

The LOR should contain an assessment of the student's knowledge, skills and aptitudes and should describe their suitability for undertaking their chosen course. The referee should describe how long they have known the student and in what capacity. They should also comment on the student's:

- ♦ intellectual capabilities
- ♦ particular abilities, strengths and weaknesses
- ♦ motivation and suitability for the programme
- ♦ communication skills
- ♦ ability to effectively communicate in English
- ♦ ability to work independently

The referee should also comment on any special attributes that they may have noticed in the student on a personal level as well as any other particular areas that may help the university make a decision the student's suitability for the course.

For MBA applicants the referee should also comment on leadership skills, capacity to reason logically, presentation skills, teamwork as well ability to work hard and meet deadlines.

* How many LORs should be submitted and in which format?

There should be at least two LORs with each application. Some universities will insist that the LOR be submitted in a pre-defined format however many will also accept a common LOR, prepared for multiple institutions, printed on the letterhead of the School/College/Company with the official stamp of the referee.
